

Dr. Vanessa Hinson is a Professor of Neurology, Director of Movement Disorders and the Parkinson's Foundation Center of Excellence at the Medical University of South Carolina. In addition, she is Chief of Neurology at the Ralph H Johnson VA Medical Center. Dr. Hinson is an MD/PhD graduate of the Hamburg School of Medicine in Germany. She went on to pursue her residency in neurology at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, and fellowship training in movement disorders at Rush University Medical Center in Chicago. Dr. Hinson's special interests include interdisciplinary care delivery in the academic and VA settings, as well as clinical trials in Parkinson's disease with an emphasis on non-motor symptoms and non-invasive brain stimulation techniques.