

Dr. Jaffar Khan is an ABPN board-certified neurologist, currently serving as Professor, Department Chair of Neurology, Vice-Chair for Education, and Assistant Dean for Medical Education at Emory University. After completing his Neurology residency and a Clinical Neurophysiology fellowship, he joined the Emory faculty. Dr. Khan has taught medical students, residents, and trainees for almost 30 years, holding leadership roles in postgraduate education, including Director of the Neurology Residency and CNP Fellowship Programs. He has received numerous teaching awards and has taught internationally, including in France, Zambia, and India. His career is defined by dedication to excellence in medical education.